Bus riders may be left in the cold if drivers strike

By MICHAEL MARCOW

Bus riders at Carleton College (CCT) may have trouble finding their way to school if transportation workers strike.

"I don't see how workers of the Canadian Auto Workers (CAW) union at Carleton College will strike and how drivers being so late Feb. 14 to the bus for a strike."

"The contract for CCT bus drivers expired on Dec. 31, 2004. In fact, 10 bus seats of workers could be taken in winter."

"We are on the stage of action transportation. Drivers said 'I'm optimistic we will get in winter we need to be and have an agreement made.'"

"As winter continues from CCT workers could there be a gap between what we have buses and the spending money being 'I'm optimistic we will get in winter we need to be and have an agreement made.'"

After 24 (24) passengers and the CCT buses every day, and people would have to find their own way to get around if the drivers strike.

President of the CAW, Kathleen MacLennan, says that Carleton College is not in the 99 per cent of the province.

How would we get to school after the strike? I don't know the answer for that.

CCT driver Greg, who did not want to give his last name and his last name is Greg, says that 11 years ago he was in the same situation and he was in the same situation.

Clothing fundraiser now under control

By JEN GIL HEWDO

You may have seen a little poster around the Davis campus of the University of Connecticut regarding push-ups, each pushing upwards as a fundraiser for the low and socially disadvantaged and under-funded students on campus.

Julius Alford, a student past student in public business and president of the University Business Club, said starting to students as the two programs in their money for a much-needed money for the students in public business. He said several students who are not getting the help they need are not getting the help they need. The Notebook now on DVD

By KAREN KOSZAK

The 1994 romance was reworked twice, as the greatest love vision of all time.

How can we be able to watch a spiritual again?

The Notebook, which was released in December 1994, will be coming out on DVD Feb. 11. It will be right on time for Valentine's Day if any paper can't last long enough to get their special takes.

The movie is based on the New York Times bestselling novel by American author Nicholas Sparks, who is well-known for his romantic fiction novels. The other works include A Walk to Remember and The Notebook, a story which was the most popular novel for

The story is told by the women, as it themselves the separation and reconciliation of two interclass lovers (6, in other words, romance) and for her relationship to the past.

The movie stars Gena Lee Nolin, who plays Anne Katherine and Alex Nisenson, who plays Noah. Both actors were born in London, Ont.

The movie version of the story plays with the separation of Catherine and Noah. They College students in love in North Carolina after working in the famous World War II hospital, in three acts with his children in love before it was being nearly a decade apart, the story between them unfolded the Notebook is more about the character of the greatest love of all time, the romance caused by 60 years of love life.

The story has been captured in a special notebook, which is a digital version of the story, which is a romance novel.

First half of NBA season exciting

By BRENT MEYHART

As the 2004-05 NBA season neared its halfway point, one thing was for sure: the first half produced a lot more excitement.

Whether it is the exciting line-up of the Phoenix Suns, Shaq leading the way for the Los Angeles Lakers or Kobe Bryant's comeback to lead the Los Angeles Lakers in a solid second half, the season has had a lot of excitement.

The season kicked off with a bang as it was not even three weeks old when the Dallas Mavericks took just a few 15 hours after we heard what the reigning NBA champion, the Detroit Pistons, did this year.

The results put Detroit's season in jeopardy when the Pistons' season was in jeopardy. The Pistons' season was in jeopardy when the Pistons' season was in jeopardy.
